National Assembly Elections Sept. 16

(Times News Services)

ALGIERS - Mohammed Khider, Secretary General of Algeria's ruling political bureau, today announced elections for the country's first national assembly probably will be held Sept. 16.

Khider spoke to reporters after more talks with leaders of the dissident wilaya 3 and ending the strife which brought to the brink of civil war.

After the talks with Ahmed Ber Bella, Khider left by helis-copter with wilaya 4 com-mander Col. Si Hassan to stop fighting between their sup-porters which broke out south of Algiers despite a cease-fire agreement reached Tuesday.

Khider said full agreement was reached in the talks and details would be worked out later in the day when commanders of all six wilayas ar-rived in Algiers with Col. Hourari Boumedienne, chief of the National Liberation Army.

He said the dissident wilayas have agreed to convert their guerrilla units into a national army even before the elections as requested by the political Khider said contingents of all the six wilayas, about 20,000 to 25,000 men, will arparade, "the biggest in the history of independent Algeria." The date for the parade has yet to be fixed.

work of her late husband and she renews the feminine influence in the House recently depleted by the loss

The narrow margin of her vic-tory over Social Gredit's candidate, the mayor of Revelstoke, however, leaves the main political issue in that constituency still wrapped in uncertainty. The late Mr. Hobbs fought strongly against the High Arrow dam. His plurality over other candidates was substantial. Now Mr. Bennett, looking through his customary rose-colored glasses, hails the defeat of his candidate as a defeat for the N.D.P. because the voting was so close. This, he says, indicates that the people of Revelstoke "support in ever greater num-

The provincial Liberal party, a poor third in the by-election, can draw little comfort from the result. Yet if the vote reflected Revelstoke opinion on the High Arrow and the whole Columbia development, the totals paradoxically suggest the merit of federal Liberal policy on that issue.

The federal Liberals have called for a re-examination of the whole question and probable renegotiation of the treaty with the United States. The people who marked ballots vesterday seem to endorse that course since-provided the Columbia and Arrow dam were the principal factors in the campaign-there seems to be no overwhelming local opinion for or against the present plan.

It seem obvious, moreover, that the voters in the riding were highly and favorably impressed by Rogers Pass project completed in nice time to coincide with the byelection. They have every reason to be satisfied with that highway link and no doubt will continue to derive benefits from it. Mr. Bennett would be the last to deny its value as a vote-catcher. On the larger problem of the Columbia, on the other hand, nothing conclusive has been proved by the ducting a training camp for prison—might it not also be helpful to civilians?

Why not a course for civilians in how to maintain their dignity, secrecy and hopes of escape under the harsh conditions of every-day business or domestic life?

Take Henry Q. Pheeps, for instance. Henry, a book-keeper in a large ac-counting office, feels that he lives under provocation that would defeat any soldier. It is true that he gets full rations and a certain amount of freedom to come and go, but here the privileges

His boss berates him, the office secretaries won't listen to him, he is snubbed by stenographers, laughed at by other book-keepers and ignored by the elevator girls. Street corner newsboys serve him last, waitresses don't see him until everyone else is attended to, clothiers and shoe salesmen unload their left-overs on him, and the busman won't wait for him even when he sees

Henry is as much a prisoner as though he were surrounded by barbed wire. Surely a training camp, with a tough obstacle course, would fit him for his hard life.

Yet the men on Sphacteria must be sen disheartened by the long the most ill-fitting rags the PX could find to sell him and forced to walk for miles in full civilian kit.

With a diploma from such a school, Henry Pheeps would return to civilian life prepared to withstand almost any-thing it could throw at him. He would be hardened, tempered, protectively coated and ready for the utmost rigors of life in our modern environment

Nothing could phaze him, nothing get under his skin. He would, in fact, able to give his fullest concentration to the three important things: his dignity, his secrecy, and his hopes of

Old Ghosts' Tale

By Joseph Alsop from Pylos, Greece

EVEN in the bright Greek air, under the golden Greek sun, Sphacteria seems sullen and uninviting. It is hard to imagine anything happening since his-tory began on this narrow, barren islet narrow, barren islet which is a mere con-tinuation of the coastal cilffs. Yet this rocky islet of Sphacteria, which supports no life, is still peopled by old ghosts who have a tale to tell that is worth hearing, even today. The time was in the first great age of the story of the West, after The time was in the first he Greeks had routed the countless hosts of Persia. Athens, bold, ingenious, and free, was then the strongest sea-power in the world, and the strongest landpower was hard, totalitarian Sparta. Thus the first great war of the West began when Athens and Sparta and their allies came to blows.

Early in this Peloponnesian War, one of Athens' shrewdest generals, tough, penny-pinching Demosthenes, seized a base here, on the Pylian headland across was a poor enough base, very hastily

To build the walls, the Athenian troops even had to "carry the mortar on their backs since they had no hods, stooping down so as to carry as much as possible, and clasping their hands behind them to prevent it from slipping off." Yet Demosthenes had chosen his

Rural Slaves

Pylos is in Messenia; and the Spartans had long since conquered this region and made all the Messenians into Helots—rural slaves who worked the land while the ruling Spartans, whose only work was war, passed their days in military exercises.

The base in Pylos therefore threatrevolt. So the Spartans mustered a strong force to drive Demosthenes and his men from their craggy fort.

There was a sharp, hot light. The ships of Athens arrived in the nick of time to support Demosthenes from the seaward side. And now the besiegers became the besieged, for the strong Athenian fleet trapped and blockaded a part of the Spartan force which had been posted on rocky Sphacteria.

This swift disaster moved the Spar-After this, Henry's office would tan ephors to send embassadors to seem like a rest; after six months of Athens to sue for peace. In truth, bayonet thrusts the office pinpricks the first great war of the West might have ended on rocky Sphacteria if the demagogue, Cleon, had not spurred the also include waitresses who literally let men of Athens to raise the price of peace beyond all reason.

have been disheartened by the long blockade. For in the end, Cleon the demagogue, now promoted to a general of Athens, was able to overwhelm the Spartans by a surprise landing with a heavily superior force.

First Surrender

Thus Cleon the demagogue the first general in the history of Greece to receive the surrender of Spartan heavy infantry, who were trained from childhood to fight to victory or death.

"This event," we are told, "caused much more surprise among the Hel-lenes than anything else that happened in the war." It also deeply influenced the long war's course, by powerfully promoting the fatal overconfidence

For just these reasons, the incomparable Thucydides, already quoted gave a complete chapter to Sphacteria in what is still the finest work of history ever written. But what made Sphacteria memorable for Thucydides is not what makes it worth our own recollection. It is worth remembering now because, in this almost-decisive the Spartans orig ily trapped on the islet numbered 440 men, and those who surrendered numbered 292.

How tiny, how all-too-human was the scale of history in those days when the balance between the world's mightiest military powers trembled and tilted towards peace for a moment, for such a cause as the events on Sphacteria! How vast, how utterly inhuman is the scale of history in our bombage!

The change in scale is what we commonly call progress. But is progress really so perfectly progressive after all? The question, Greece-inspired, is obvi-ously reactionary if not downright subversive. It is time to leave Pylos for back issues of our Victoria papers I came across this item in the issue of April 28, 1889:

The pictorial strip "Frontiers of Science" appearing in the Times is both interesting and instructive. In "Rockets-Part 4" the chronology leaps from 1820

"BUFFALO-Entertainer to bring Camarrara to give exhibitions. A Mr. Edselle of Callan. Peru, formerly of the United States Navy, devised a human sky rocket. Four tubes form the framework and contained a solid explosive. A test was made under Peruvian government patronage in December. The charge touched off by electricity sent the machine over 15,545 feet and the descent by para-chute was perfect. Seg. Cumarrara landed five miles from the starting point no worse for the trip."

Could this have been the first suc-cessful manned rocket trip? LINN A. GALE. P.O. Box 115, Victoria, B.C.

World Federation for Survival

World Federalism is already coming ices, air traffic control, health services. etc., under the direction of international agencies. These United Nations agencies have been very successful an I their exis tance is now taken for granted by people throughout the whole world.

In its historical development, law and order first existed within families but not among families; later it grew to exist within tribes (that is, among families) but not among tribes, and so on until today it exists on vast national scales and its extension to international affairs under some form of world federation is obviously the next step. An annihilating third world war is sure to occur, sooner or later, unless we establish international law and law enforcement. It is high time that we set aside our hostility and greed and set to work earnest on this problem.

Dr. B. Chisholm, a former director the World Health Organization, will speak about World Federalism on the evening of Sept. 10 at Sanscha Hall. E. H. RICHARDSON.

This is a happy outcome of courageous action by the fair organizers. They could, of course, depend on the strength and the support of exhibitors who have made the event a red letter day on South Vancouver Island's agricultural, horticultural and handicraft calendar. With the crucial year behind them, may they go on from strength tentious. It reminds me of Bret Harte's to strength. If they have any poem (1840's in California) about the to strength. If they have any poem (1840's in California) about the doubts about the popularity of their old Padre and the girl waif in the Misshow, they need only look at the attendance figures—13,000. Communist Overcrowding

SUDDEN SPONSORSHIP OF A birth control by the Communist Party of China in 1957 could perhaps be explained by the bad harvest, industrial difficulties, unemployment and other problems besetting the government. Some elements in the Party found the support necessary to inaugurate a "family planning" campaign. But basically was contrary to the Red Chinese thesis of "bigger and better" and it was soon abruptly abandoned.

It is significant today that Party support for a birth control program is again evident, although officially the term is avoided. Reports tell of increased Party interest in a program of later marriages-the cial age is 20 years for men and 18 for women—and the publicized recommendation that no man should be a father until he is 26, with a minimum age of 23 for mothers. With this advice goes the further

This is a direct reversal of the standard Party line and it could be interpreted as an admission that China has too many people for its present capacity to provide food and shelter. It certainly runs counter to the general theme that Red China is rapidly forging to the front as a world power, and to the philosophy of the "great leap forward."

Sir Thomas Knew What Americans Put in the Water

First of three dispatches on the America's Cup races

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI)—On a Saturday, 10 days away, a scene resembling the evacuation of Dunkirk will transpire off the shores of this once August resort as a flotilla of small-boat sailors from President Kennedy on down puts out to watch the first race of the 111-year-old America's Cup competition.

They will pitch and roll for approximately five hours in the wake of two sleek sailboats skimming along at a maxi-mum 13 miles per hour and a minimum expense of one million dellars in pursuit of a two-foot tall silver pitcher

Four years ago, President Eisenhower watched the race for a time, then headed straight for the golf course. Ring Lardner once compared its excitement to "watching

The America's Cup has been in U.S. hands ever the summer of 1851 when the snooty Royal Yacht Club of Great Britain made the mistake of letting the former colonials put their America into a race with Britain's fastest sailing craft around the Isle of Wight.

Aussie Threat Isn't Taken Lightly History records that as the America crossed the finish line. Queen Victoria turned to a flunkey and said:

"Who is second?"
"Madam," was the reply, "there is no second."

Since that pre-Civil War day, the British—and twice the Canadians—have tried to win the cup back on 17 occasions.

They have yet to succeed.

Irish Scotsman Sir Thomas Lipton built five sailboats, all named Shamrock, in a $10 million effort to get the bottemless cup. He went home empty handed, leaving behind only his self-owned multi-million dollar tea business. A consoling English lady told him:

Sir Thomas, they must put something in the water that makes you lose."

They certainly do," said Sir Thomas, "Better boats."

ing overboard.

This year, for the first time, the challenger for the America'se Cup will be the Australians. And, remembering what happened to American tennis players under the Aussle onslaught for the Davis Cup, the threat is not being taken

A syndicate headed by Sir Frank Packer, Australian publisher and self-made millionaire, shipped from down under a seek 12-meter boat named Gretel and pronounced.

On Sept. 15, Gretel will begin a best four-out-of-seven match against Weatherly, the American boat selected after

Russia May Join Scramble for Cup

The other U.S. competitors were Easterner, Nefertiti and Columbia, each built and raced for the season, as age Gretel and Weatherly, at a cost of more than half a million dollars.

It was Columbia which four years ago defended the cup for the first time since the 1930s. Columbia so out-classed the British challenger, Sceptre, that she won four straight races, two of them by the humiliating distance of straight races, two of them by the huminating distance of more than a mile.

Rumor has it that the Russians are designing their own 12 meter to challenge the winner of this year's Americas Cup. And there is further talk of a four or five-way race with the British and Canadians joining.

Over the years, Anglo-American feelings have been strained over the defeats suffered unendingly by the British who claimed (with considerable justification) that the rules were stacked against them and bemoaned the armada spectator boats which came close to sinking the com-

How Big Is the Biggest Living Animal?

A friend gets on top of the fog and becomes a fortune-teller (7) 19. A bit of fish many found he is smart enough to learn the meaning of about 25 different words. But the tall giraffe and the bulky elephant are both little fellas compared with the biggest living animal. We find the biggest living animal in the sea, for he roams in the deep oceans usurally far from the shores. You could walk around inside his huge mouth and standing beside him, an elephant would look no bigger than a poofide dog. Mr. Big is also a smart animal. We have not had much chance to train this deep-water giant, but some experts think that he is one of the most intelligent animals in the world.

How Big is the Biggest Living

The gentle giraffe is the tallest animal in the world and the elephant is the biggest animal you will ever find in the zoo. Jumbo may weigh four tons. He needs about 150 pounds of hay every day and he is smart enough to learn the meaning of about 25 difters on the ground. This will take to the meaning of about 25 difters on the ground. This will take the properties of the meaning of about 25 differs on the ground. This will take the blue balcen whale or the sulphur-bottom whale. From head to tall he may measure 100 feet. This is hard to imagine unless we use something with which to compare him. You can, of course, measure off 33 yards of distance on the ground. This will perts think that he is one of the most intelligent animals in the world.

Mr. Big is the giant of the giant whale family of animals.

I have once again agreed to be a judge at a beardy con-

(Nobody ever asks me to be a judge at a beauty contest, but my wife wouldn't let me, anyhow.)

The beardy contest with which I am about to be em-broiled has something to do with the Victoria centenary, and takes place Sept. 14 in, of all places, the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

A beardy contest is a sports event? Well, I guess you have to be a good sport to enter.

But I mustn't be flippant about this beardy contest. Last time I was a beard judger, I approached the chore in a somewhat light-hearted manner, paying rather more at-tention to the polishing of wisecracks than to the hirsuite ent of entrants.

And I found out beard growers take their avocation seriously. They wish to be judged with the same painstaking care and effort they, themselves, put into the growing of the

This time, then, I approach my task as a beardy contest judge with all seriousness, and have already commenced reearching the subject of beards.

The beards with which we shall have to deal on the evening of Sept. 14 are probably composed of the hair which grows upon a man's face.

But there is nothing in my book (the Oxford dictionary) which bars the similar growth on the face of animals other than man, for example, the goat, the lion, etc.

(Given my choice, I'll take etc.)

Also, my faithful. Oxford tells me, the appendages to the mouths of some fishes are perfectly legitimate beards. Oysters have beards, as do other bivalves possessed of rows. of gills. Moths have beards and so do butterflies, situated (just for laughs) above the antlia.

The Barbet (the bird, not the small, woolly-type dog with the long curly hair) has a beard, too, right at the base of the beak.

There is also a fresh-water shrimp, a hake, and a kind of pigeon who answer to the name "Beard."

And don't forget, the beard is the Bysuss of a certain type of shellfish. (I won't tell you which type—with a You must believe me when I tell you I am researching

Cement Fawns and Frogs Make Garden Interesting By PENNY SAVER

Does your garden have a life-size fawn curled up on the lawn beside the flower beds?

And does your pool boast a quaint frog, "hands" clasped over its heart like an opera star in the midst of a soul-stirring aria, combined with "feet" crossed daintily at the ankles like a woman out for tea?

Unless you have the fawn-filled garden I stroll past now and then when my friend Linda has borrowed the car and left me to walk home, you are one of the great number of Victoria gardeners who haven't yet discovered what fun it is to accessorize your garden with these lifelike cement figures.

Shop which carries things like this for your garden makes them of cement in aluminum molds which they buy. There are many items on display which they have already painted, but they are only too glad to paint to suit the customer's taste and needs, or to sell items unpainted and give

Mild Exercise Can Help;
But Make It Regular

Nature may have planned for us to procrastinate (I hope), but I feel that she did not mean for us to stagnate, either in mind or body. Activity is the eassence of being alive, in our muscles, our emotions and swing your right kee and slide your left side and swing your right leg back to place. Continue, and swing your right leg back to make the side and swing your right leg back is right in mild, mustard and melt string in mild. Beat eggs well; stir in milk, mustard and melt string lamorous!

AGASSIZ (CP)-A Sons Freedom Doukhobor has representative told by municipal officials hat Freedomites no marching on the Agassiz area will not be allowed to build a "shacktown" here.

Joe Podovinikoff, who acts as a spokesman for the Free-domite fraternal council, con-ferred Tuesday night with mu-nicipal officials of Harrison Hot Springs and Kent municipality.

He told acting reeve Lew

Davis and the township coun-cil representatives that the fraternal council had not ordered the march of the Free domites from their burnedout shacktown of Krestova to the Agassiz area where a new Federal prison houses a number of their fellows convited of terrorism.

He said the council did not know what would happen. He had come, he said, in a private capacity to learn the reaction of the people of the Agassiz

Mr. Davis told him that Agassiz does not have the schools, land or buildings to accommodate such an influx. Even if the Freedomites bought land, they would not be allowed to erect ram-shackle buildings. Most municipal officials felt the Freedomites would never complete their long trek from the Kootenays.

TOUGHEST PART

Meanwhile, weary Sons of Freedom broke camp at a farmers field today and set out on the toughest section of their 500-mile trek.

A narrow and tortuous stretch of gravelled mountain road lay between the estimated marchers and Grand Forks. B.C., where they hope to camp tonight. A car-truck shuttle service will take most of them over the mountain "hump."

Spokesman for the marchers were uncertain about how many would get through the Monashee Mountains today.

Only about 100 of the Free omies camped in the open ere Tuesday night. The rest, including about 100 children, spent the night at the homes of friends and relatives.

The beardy contest with which I am about to be embroiled has something to do with the Victoria centenary, and takes place Sept. 14 in, of all places, the Esquimals Sports Centre.

A beardy contest is a sports event? Well, I guess you have to be a good sport to enter.

But I mustn't be flippant about this beardy contest, Last time I was a beard judger. I approached the chore in a somewhat light-hearted manner, paying rather more attention to the polishing of wisecracks than to the hirsute achievement of entrants.

And I found out beard growers take their avocation seriously. They wish to be judged with the same painstaking care and effort they, themselves, put into the growing of the

This time, then, I approach my task as a beardy contest judge with all seriousness, and have already commenced researching the subject of beards.

The beards with which we shall have to deal on the evening of Sept. 14 are probably composed of the hair which grows upon a man's face.

But there is nothing in my book (the Oxford dictionary) which bars the similar growth on the face of animals other than man, for example, the goat, the lion, etc.

(Given my choice, I'll take etc.)

Also, my faithful. Oxford tells me, the appendages to the mouths of some fishes are perfectly legitimate beards. Oysters have beards, as do other bivalves possessed of rows of gills. Moths have beards and so do butterflies, situated (just for laughs) above the antlia.

Quakes Quiver Around World

New earthquakes struck today in Italy and Turkey as Iran continued to bury its dead from last weekend's disastrous quake

Another quake rocked buildings in the Japanese city of Chosi, about 80 miles northeast of Tokyo, the Japanese meteorological agency reported, but did no damage.

Earthquakes were reported Tuesday night and early today in Igdir, near Turkey's border with Iran. Reports reaching Istanbul said about 100 persons were injuried and many houses and public buildings were damaged.

Ersel cuakes bit the area.
